Introduction

Jane bought a new car which holds a number plate showing #88. In addition, her home telephone number also has double eight while her fax number is #888. Jane does consider herself to be superstitious about her family and career but she is however not obsessed with it. The Chinese are basically superstitious in choosing their house, telephone and car numbers and they are very careful in leaving no loophole in this matter.

Why only speak of the Chinese? Let us take the example of the English - the Europeans too. You will rarely come across any home, car, telephone or fax numbers with 13 since the Europeans consider '13' to be the most unlucky number for them. (To know the telephone number attributes of your contact number, you can try MB Telephone Number Numerology Software <http://mb-free-telephone-number-numerology.mysticboard.com/>). The Chinese consider number 4 to be a lucky one, because as per the Xuan Kong, flying star number '4' is the romance star.

Numbers And Luck In Feng Shui

Numerology is one of the most ancient forms of science. It deals with numbers and this concept was first developed by the Greek philosopher Pythagoras in the 6th century B.C. This has inculcated a belief within us since the past decades, that numerology or the 'number magic', to a great extent reveals our motives and opportunities. I personally prefer numerology for 3 specific reasons: it makes you the Master of Timing, it helps you make the perfect choice and it acts as the mirror. Numbers are considered to have an identity and a reality of their own in the world of numerology. According to the numerologists everything on Earth - living or dead, material or immaterial can be transformed into numbers which have their own meaning and significance.

Numerology is looked upon by the Chinese people as not only a mere study of numbers but something which has the power of changing their life style. They believe that numbers do possess certain magical qualities. Feng Shui - the ancient Chinese philosophy based on nature is the art of placing and arranging things so as to attain maximum harmony. Nature is considered to be magical as per the Feng Shui principles as all the natural things can be explained through numbers. Thus, there is a very close relation between Feng Shui and Numerology.

Feng Shui Numbers

According to Feng Shui principles some numbers are lucky while others are unlucky. attributes conducive to your nature, personality and natural behavioral traits. You can also get an insight into the chances of your acquiring success and fortune.

Unlucky Feng Shui Numbers

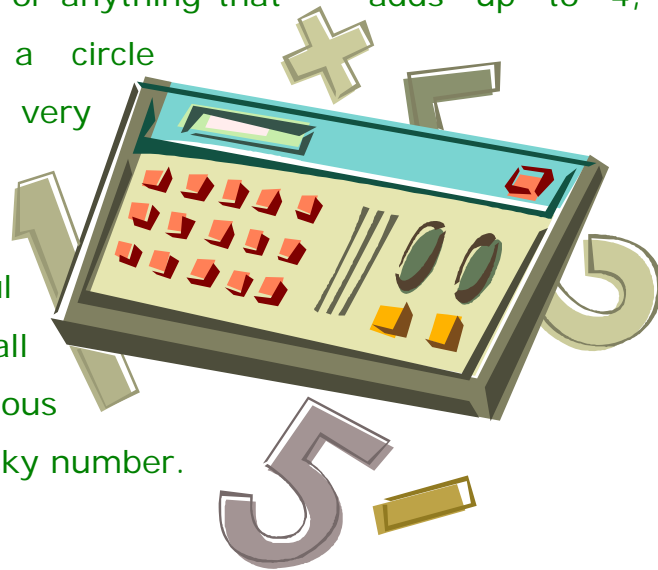

Number 4 is said to be the most unlucky number according to the Feng Shui rules as it sounds very much like the word 'death'. 13 is also considered to be unlucky as it sums up to 4. Any number series having 4 in it or adding up to 4 are considered unlucky numbers by the Chinese.

Lucky Feng Shui Numbers

Any number series having or adding up to 8, 18, 28, 38, 48, 54, 68, 80, 84, 88, 99, 168 & 108 are said to be lucky and good numbers. The reason is because 8 sounds like the word "faat" which means luck, abundance and prosperity according to the Chinese.

The Chinese believe that if you own a business or a home numbered 4 or 13 or anything that adds up to 4, then just draw a circle around that very number. They consider the circle to be powerful which wards off all the inauspicious effects of the unlucky number.

Conclusion

Numerology or the numbers in Feng Shui represents the five elemental forces namely earth, fire, water, wood and metal. The Chinese also use numbers for the purpose of predicting the future and to study the lucky charm of a certain direction. It is a common belief among the Chinese that on changing the numbers associated with them, helps them in changing their lives as well. However, it must be noted that this belief is their empowerment, not their superstition.
